I have reneged on absolutely nothing and I really don't appreciate the stridency of the tone in your and Mr. Elliott's correspondence. If you have a problem with the timetable I have provided or believe I have made a misrepresentation to you or the Court, you should feel free to seek relief from the Court. If you do not seek relief from the Court, I will assume that this is just more disingenuous bluster.

We understand each other fairly well, Mr. Balber. You have reneged on the representations you made at the Case Management Conference that you would send a letter shortly thereafter explaining Plaintiff's position on the issue of standing.

I am always willing to discuss such matters in a telephone call. Indeed, it is my preference. Unfortunately, you have also made it clear that any discussion we might have to convince you to stand by your earlier representation of providing this information without the need to engage in formal discovery would be futile.

If you believe that a discussion would be helpful, then please feel free to call me..

Dear Mr. Keating --

You appear to have misinterpreted or willfully ignored my prior email.
I will provide the letter I said I would at the same time I respond to the outstanding discovery requests served by Mr. Elliott. My issue with Mr. Elliott was only as to the timing of when I would provide the letter. In the future, why don't you pick the phone and call me instead of sending letters and emails. Copy my colleague Emily Abrahams on all correspondence.

Regards,
